SUPPER TIME BRIDGE BLOCK

25 POLICEMEN TACKLE CROWD PACKED AT ENTRANCE.

Brighton Beach Train Snaps an Axle and Chokes the Rails. Elevated Travelers March Downstairs to Jam the Trunkless One Man Run Over by Train.

Just at the beginning of the critical hour when all of tired Brooklyn and further Flatbush hastens to leave Manhattan homeward bound, the axle of a Brighton Beach string snapped as the train was leaving its pocket at the Brooklyn Bridge station last night and for more than two hours there was the usual bridge incident to breaks in the transit schedule. For two more hours the service across the bridge limped and it was not until after a o'clock that everything was running smoothly again.

The accident occurred at 5:07 o'clock, just as the Brighton Beach train of six cars was leaving the "white pocket" or southernmost switchback on the station platform, to make the cross over to the southbound track across the bridge. When the axle snapped a pin in the coupling between the disabled car and the one ahead broke also, and the front platform of the disabled car was sent into the island platform to the north of the "white tracks" taking away several feet of railing.

The "white" car and the southern track was grounded at the same time, and the man in the switch tower, seeing the trouble immediately shut off the power on all the tracks leading in and out of the station. Nothing but a severe jarring was experienced by the passengers in the crowded Brighton Beach train. After every one in that train and others stalled by the shutting off of the power had fidgeted for about ten minutes the order "All out!" was passed through all of the trains which had been filled, and they began a pell-mell rush for the stairs and the surface cars and subway below.

The traction company's officers frisked out their bundles of transfers after having communicated with the B. R. T. headquarters in Brooklyn and as the morning full company of Brooklynites jammed its way down the stairs the little slips were shuffled. An assailed in force upon all of the surface cars crossing the bridge, and there were many bitter moments of jamming and heated conversation.

The descending crowds met the rush of would-be passengers from the downtown avenues of the city. Where the two waves clashed there was confusion which delayed the surface cars temporarily and gave the policemen injured to such momentary reason to believe that their jobs were not the easiest on the force. Deputy Commissioner Driscoll got the tip at Headquarters that there was trouble at the bridge and he hurried down there to take charge of the bridge squad and the rescue from the "white" street station and the "white" street station.

Before long the city police were on the scene, and the "white" street station was being shunted by the "white" street station. The "white" street station was being shunted by the "white" street station. The "white" street station was being shunted by the "white" street station. The "white" street station was being shunted by the "white" street station.

By 7 o'clock the stalling train had been removed and trains on the "white line" began to run on half time schedule. In Brooklyn meantime the culvert, Fulton and Brighton Beach line trains were halted at the Sands street station and switched back.

One man was hurt as an indirect result of the tieup. Julius Raymond, of 48 Wyckoff avenue, Brooklyn, was forced by the crowd into the north roadway at the Park row end of the bridge and was knocked down by a team. He was treated by a surgeon from the Hudson street hospital and later he went to his home.

INTERBOROUGH'S NEW OFFER.
Subway Proposition to Be Submitted to P. S. Commission Tomorrow.

The Interborough company will submit its new offer in the subway situation to the Public Service Commission tomorrow. There was a meeting of some of the directors of the company yesterday but it was said that the details of the proposition would not be made known until sent to the commission.

It is probable that the new proposal will be in general outline a renewal of the offer to build the southerly extension of the present subway from Times Square under Seventh avenue to the Battery and an extension north from the Grand Central station under Lexington avenue.

It is further believed that if these privileges are granted the company will be able to bear one-half the cost of construction. The estimated cost of the work is $70,000,000. If the triborough route goes through that subway will occupy Lexington avenue.

There was a report in the City Hall yesterday that the Mayor was preparing a statement which would tend to show that he had modified his views somewhat on the disadvantages of a dual subway system, but although it was late before the Mayor left the City Hall no statement came from him.

President McAdoo of the Hudson and Manhattan Company will have his amended offer for the triborough system ready for presentation to the Public Service Commission today or tomorrow. This new offer will provide for the equipment and operation of the Fourth avenue line in Brooklyn and the extensions in the Bronx of the triborough line.

We are anxious to get the contract for the operation of the triborough route," he said yesterday. "But speaking from a personal standpoint I don't think the awarding of such a contract to us is so important as that the company be principal in subway building should be served. I do not think that the Board of Estimate will ever give the operation of the new subway to the traction monopoly."

CROCKER ESTATE $12,000,000.

Largest Stockholdings Were in U. S. Steel and Tel. and Tel.

The transfer tax appraisal of the estate of George Crocker was filed yesterday by Appraiser Hoelzer M. Greene, but it was not accessible to inquirers at the Surrogate's office.

Eugene D. Hawkins, attorney for the Crocker estate, said last night that the total estate is $12,000,000, of which about $2,000,000 is in real estate. This includes the house at 1 East Sixty-fourth street which was left with its contents to Columbia University and a large number of stockholdings and a large number of other real estate. The appraiser values the contents of the house at $100,000. Other real estate left by Mr. Crocker is in Larchmont and Tarrytown and his country place at Larchmont.

The value of the securities is about $10,000,000. The majority of the securities covers several hundred pages, the largest blocks of securities being U. S. Steel common and preferred, there being nearly 10,000 shares of each. Mr. Crocker's next largest holding was in American Telephone and Telegraph stock. The appraiser valued this property at $1,000,000.

Under the will Mr. Crocker's residuary estate goes to his wife, Mrs. William H. Crocker, his sister, Harriet H. Alexander, his niece, Jennie Crocker, and his nephew, Charles H. Crocker, in equal shares.

MUSE OPERA STANDEES GO.
Fire Commissioner Waldo Called On to Settle an Old Question.

A fireman on duty at the Metropolitan Opera House last night decided that the space behind the orchestra rail contained too many standees. He sent the Treasurer Brown and told him that the space ought to be cleared so that circulation could be free. Mr. Brown explained that the space was always used for standees and that the outer corridor provided the required circulation space.

The fireman telephoned for Fire Commissioner Waldo, who quickly arrived at the house and held a conference with Mr. Brown.

The fire commissioner was conducted about the house and the numerous aisles made it impossible to show him the space behind the orchestra rail. He was explained to him that the space behind the orchestra rail had always been used for standees and that although firemen had on several previous occasions complained the matter had always been settled in accordance with the long standing custom. Mr. Waldo expressed himself as generally pleased with the safety of the house and said that he would give a decision to-day on the point at issue.

JAPANESE COMING TO COMPETE.
Bernard N. Baker Says They Plan to Use Panama Canal.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 28.—Bernard N. Baker says that he received information to-day from an authoritative source that the Royal Mail Packet Company of England has bought the Pacific Steam Navigation Company of South America and is now making plans to carry mails under sub-contract from England to Japan and through the Panama Canal to Valparaiso, Callao and Valparaiso via the same route.

In addition to this enterprise he learns that the Japanese have arranged to subsidize a line from New York direct to Callao and Valparaiso with the avowed purpose of carrying American goods and have secured a subsidy from the Japanese Government but from the Peruvian Government as well. In order to maintain control of the trade Japan purposes after learning the class of goods in demand to produce the goods in its own country and send out the manufactured articles so that eventually the Orientals can drive the Americans out of their own territory.

This last venture is regarded as the most formidable of any yet inaugurated.

Already Japan has ordered a number of steamers capable of covering twenty-one knots an hour, which are to be used exclusively in the South American trade.

With all the advantages offered Mr. Baker thinks it will be comparatively easy for the Japanese to gain a foothold and secured a subsidy from the Japanese Government to drive out American competition unless some steps are taken to counteract the move.

WED DESPITE BRIDE'S FATHER.
Howard T. Walker and Fefe May Blake Married in Early Morning in Stamford.

STAMFORD, Conn., Nov. 28.—Howard T. Walker, aged 24, son of William H. Walker, and Miss Fefe May Blake, 22 years old, both of New York, were married here yesterday morning early by the Rev. John D. Skene, rector of St. Andrew's Church.

Howard T. Walker is a New York City lawyer, the best man. The couple had intended to be married here Saturday night at 9 o'clock and the best man had made arrangements by telephone with a Stamford justice of the peace. They did not keep the appointment. When they arrived yesterday morning Mr. Polakley told the justice that the bride was due to the home of her father, Frederick Blake, on Riverside Drive, who, he said, opposed the marriage.

ULSTER THREATENS TO REBEL

ORANGEMEN PREPARE TO ARM AGAINST HOME RULE.

Day of Excited Meetings in Belfast. Belfast Urges Them to Stand Firm. Londonderry Raises Religious Issue. New Parliament to Meet Jan. 31.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—The Unionists of Ulster are fiercely agitated over the renewed prominence of the home rule issue and are breathing threats of fire and slaughter. The Ulster Unionist Council had a series of meetings at Belfast to-day, at one of which, a private session, it was agreed, according to the Unionist papers, to draw up a solemn declaration refusing to pay taxes on rates imposed by any Dublin parliament or to obey any decrees issued by such a parliament.

It is added that the meeting appointed an emergency committee to organize Ulster men into regiments. The sum of $50,000 was subscribed for the purpose of buying arms. This, it is declared, is "no bluff." The Orangemen are in deadly earnest, and if the Liberals return to power to establish home rule Ulster will become an armed camp within a few weeks.

Whether or not this picture is overdrawn it is certain that the antipathy of the Ulster Unionists to home rule is as violent as on past occasions when it was a prominent plank of the Liberals' platform.

There was a great Unionist demonstration in Belfast this evening and an overflow meeting displayed a great enthusiasm that has not been paralleled since Lord Randolph Churchill raised the famous battle cry, "Ulster will fight and Ulster will be right."

The Marquis of Londonderry presided. He read a message from ex-Prime Minister Balfour saying: "If Ulster stands firm a home rule Radical coalition will never succeed in forcing the disruption of the United Kingdom upon a hostile and determined people."

The Marquis of Londonderry declared that home rule meant the placing of the Protestant neck under the Roman Catholic heel, and he predicted that Ulster would never obey a home rule Parliament.

King George's first Parliament, which lasted only ten months, came to an end to-day. There was an array of nearly empty benches when Black Rod summoned the House of Commons to the House of Peers Winston Churchill, the Home Secretary, was the only Minister present and the front Opposition bench was empty.

The King's speech, read in the House of Lords, opened with a reference to the loss occasioned by the death of King Edward and his successor's earnest desire "to follow in my dear father's footsteps." The speech said that the relations of Great Britain with foreign Powers continue to be friendly and then went on thus:

"I confidently hope that the questions connected with the north Atlantic fisheries between Canada and Newfoundland on the one hand and the United States of America on the other, which have been the subject of controversy for nearly a century, have been at last finally settled by the award of the Hague Tribunal. It is a cause for special satisfaction that it has been found possible to solve by arbitration problems of such an intricate and difficult nature and that the award has been received on both sides of the Atlantic in a spirit which must tend to increase good will."

A reference to the opening of the first Parliament in South Africa and the scheme of administrative reform for India the speech concluded as follows:

"I regret that the conference which took place with a view to arriving at a solution of the recurring difficulties between the two Houses of Parliament has failed to come to an agreement."

A royal proclamation was issued this afternoon summoning the new Parliament to meet on January 31, 1911.

Joseph Chamberlain will be one of the first members of the new Parliament. He has been chosen again by the Unionists despite his ill health to represent West Birmingham, and he will not be opposed. Mr. Chamberlain has represented this constituency since 1876.

THINK PRAYER SAVED BOY.
His Father, a Physician, and His Mother Express That Belief.

YONKERS, Nov. 28.—The recovery of six-year-old Victor Waldron from the coma in which he lay for forty-three days following the fracture of his skull when run over by an automobile owned by former Corporation Counsel Rives of New York city is attributed by many to the power of prayer. The boy's father, Dr. Louis W. Waldron, said to-day:

"Both Mrs. Waldron and myself feel that the prayers of our friends and various organizations have been answered. We feel a deep sense of gratitude to God."

Mrs. Waldron said to-night that the prayers doubtless saved the boy's life. All those who prayed, she said, did so voluntarily. The supplicants who asked that the child's life be spared included the congregation of the Park Hill Reformed Church, the Boys' Club of St. Andrew's Church, various ministers and friends and a number of social and religious organizations.

Claude Grahame-White, the English aviator, who will sail for Europe to-morrow on the steamship Mauretania, announced yesterday that he would return to this country in January and start three schools of aviation. He said the seven aeroplanes for which he has placed an order with the Burgess-Curtis Company at Marblehead, Mass., will be used at the different aerodromes. He thinks this country is in need of such an enterprise.

SOLID PETROL.
Rumanian Inventor Says It Solves All Motor Difficulties. Solid Paraffin Too.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—Solid petrol is one of the latest joys offered to automobilists. It is the invention of a Rumanian doctor. Its uses are being demonstrated in London by M. Constantinescu, a Rumanian engineer, who developed the idea.

It is said to have many virtues. Among other things it burns without smell or smoke, its cost is two-thirds that of the liquid, it eliminates the use of a carburetor, is safely portable in a wooden box or even wrapped in paper, affords complete combustion, is of greater smoothness than the liquid, will develop greater power and is easily convertible into liquid.

M. Constantinescu says that crude oil and paraffin can be solidified by the same process. He says it is possible to run an automobile with solid paraffin. He also talks of using solid petrol for ship engines, lamps and other purposes.

THEY PUKED HUSBANDS.
Two More Fortune Tellers Arrested After Providing for Woman Detectives.

Two fortune tellers who escaped last Friday's police net were arrested yesterday charged with being disorderly persons. They are "Prof" Vincenzo Santoro, who resides at 12 West Forty-fifth street, and "Prof" Alfred Rice of 215 West Forty-fifth street.

Detective Wilbur arrested Vincenzo in his rooms on evidence secured by police manmaid Leslie, who says the professor told her on November 8 that he could pick out a first class husband for $38. She gave him $5 on account.

Rice, who works with Miss Leslie on November 12. His price for picking a husband was $30 and Rice did not sniff at $1 on account.

GAMBLERS GO TO THE MAYOR

COMPLAIN OF BEING RAIDED AFTER PAYING FOR PROTECTION.

Give Me Your Proof, Says the Mayor, and We Will Look Into It—Two of Driscoll's Raiders Named—Commissioner Himself With a Gun Figures in Narrative.

Five men who admitted that they were interested in a gambling house raided by Deputy Police Commissioner Driscoll and his policemen a few days ago called on Mayor Gaynor yesterday and complained of police extortion. They told the Mayor that they were not so much put out about the raiding of the place as they were of having the raid made after they had paid up. They are understood to have told the Mayor to whom the levies which had been made upon them had been paid, but the names they gave were not made public, except those of two policemen. These two whose names were given to the Mayor were Lieut. Cody of Commissioner Driscoll's vice squad and a detective named Murphy, also attached to Driscoll's private force.

The spokesmen for the delegation were Samuel Newman and Martin Bernstein, who informed the Mayor that they had been assaulted by Cody and Murphy as they were leaving a building in West 116th street on Friday night last. After telling the Mayor that they had been beaten with blackjacks by the two policemen while at the same time Commissioner Driscoll was walking up and down the corridor of the building with a revolver in his hand, Newman and Bernstein asserted that Cody had been grafting from gambling houses.

They told the Mayor that a short while ago Cody had gone into a gambling place in Third avenue near Thirteenth street and had asked for a loan of $500. The man didn't have the money, according to the story told to the Mayor, but he got $500 from his partner and as a security for it Cody left what was supposed to be a diamond ring. The men who called on the Mayor yesterday said that this ring was afterward shown to be valueless, the supposed diamond being glass.

The callers on the Mayor said that they could produce several more security rings supposed to be running gambling houses who had paid money for protection.

The Mayor listened to the statements made to him by his callers with the closest interest and assured them that they would have every opportunity to prove their charges. He asked them to send to him as soon as possible all the facts they had to substantiate their assertions that money had been paid for the "protection" of gambling houses and he personally promised that no harm would come to any one giving such evidence as would tend to show that the charges were well founded.

Commissioner Driscoll said that it made him smile to hear gamblers complain of having to pay for protection. There was no complaint from that source, said he, when things were rosy and money was coming in. It was only when business was bad that the kicks came. He was asked if he had been to the 116th street house and said that he had been there to investigate conditions. He did not run about flourishing a revolver, however, nor did his police assault any one, although there was lots of provocation.

Then he told a little story which he said he had made up, but which he also asserted was pertinent. This is the story:

"One man tells another to open up a place and gives him the wherewithal to do it. The man opens the place but goes back on the cash producer and enters into an agreement with a third man. Then comes the man who had put up the money and runs an opposition game in the same house, and complaints come into the District Attorney's office because of the rivalry. When the two are both operating on the same floor the District Attorney's office is told that there will be deeds of violence done and the police go up and investigate."

There is no moral to that story, says the Commissioner.

The Commissioner further said that there had been no complaints at Headquarters of the District Attorney's office from shaken down gamblers. Some gamblers had gone with complaints to the District Attorney about the stringency with which they had been treated by the police and were told to bring witnesses before the Grand Jury. This they refused to do, said Mr. Driscoll.

"I should not be surprised if some of these so-called socialists had come to complain of the police in the future," he concluded.

INVITED TO PICK A POCKET.
Court Lets an Old Crook Off Lightly and Reproves Detectives.

Joseph Jones, 79 years old, who was arrested for picking the pocket of a detective, got a very light sentence yesterday because Judge Malone in General Sessions does not think that the police should invite crime. He was sent to the penitentiary for six months.

Jones has spent thirty-one years of his life behind the bars and is known to the men of the Central Office. When two of them saw him jostling in the crowds at the Fourteenth street station of the subway they decided to get him if they could.

One of the detectives took a half dollar from his trousers and dropped it in the change pocket of his overcoat. He made sure that Jones had seen him and then got into the crowd near Jones, while the other detective looked on. Jones didn't miss the chance and was nabbed. Judge Malone said that the Court could not sanction such proceedings.

Just after Jones was sentenced a young burglar convicted under the name of Robert Brown, who was caught trying to rob an apartment in East Forty-ninth street. He had a kit of burglar's tools and a revolver. Judge Malone sentenced him to not less than fifteen years in Sing Sing, with the maximum of a life sentence as hard labor.

WHITNEY PROPERTY SOLD

Long Island Estate Turned Over to Realty Company.

HEMPSTEAD, L. I., Nov. 28.—Four deeds transferring the Long Island estate of the late William C. Whitney at Wheatly Hills to the Whitney Realty Company of 165 Broadway, Manhattan, were filed here to-day.

The house and surrounding buildings were erected at a cost of about $1,000,000 during the life of Mr. Whitney, who died in 1904. The famous racing stable is one of the notable features of the place. A large part of it is glassed in and one of its features is an interior half mile track.

Since the death of her father, Miss Dorothy Whitney, the only unmarried child, has been occupying the Wheatly Hills place. It is not known whether or not the property is being turned over to the realty company to be resold and the proceeds divided.
